Apple's third-generation Siri Remote for the Apple TV is not natively supported on the device, as the Siri Remote was originally released back in 2014. The update also does not support mirroring the Apple TV remote app on an iPhone or iPad. Alongside the new native apps for the Apple TV, Apple has updated its Home app to introduce a new Apple TV section. The new section includes a section for Apple TV channels with a Watch, TV and Home button, and links to home screen and Watch Live sections. Today's new app update also includes the new Home app's Sleep Timer and Apple TV Remote notifications. Apple TV owners can download the Apple TV Remote app from the App Store now and if you have an Apple TV, it's likely that you have received the update. The Apple TV is a media set-top box that allows users to stream TV shows, movies, and other content from iTunes, iCloud, Apple TV+, Amazon Video, Netflix, and other sources. The Apple TV box is priced at $229. FTC: We use income earning auto affiliate links. More. Check out 9to5Mac on YouTube for more Apple news: Startup Hacks - jasonlbaptiste ====== rms More good ones:
